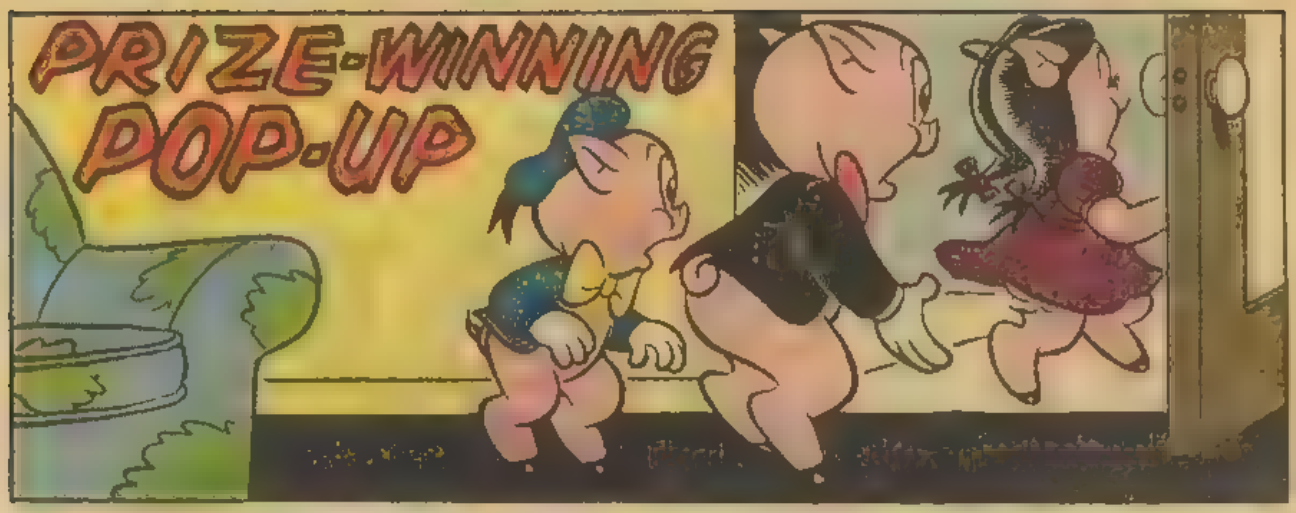
THE END



"But, Porky," Petunia protested, "almost everyone in town is going to enter the skating contests at the new ice rink Saturday. You'll miss out on all the fun if you don't enter one of the contests, too!"

"G-Golly," Porky gulped, "I don't want to miss out on the fun, but I'm such a poor skater I wouldn't stand a chance!"

"The least you can do is try!" Petunia insisted. "They're having speed, figure, and novelty skating events. Even Cicero, here, is entering the figure skating event!"

"I'd just look like a goof," Porky protested. "I can hardly stand up on skates, let alone race or do anything fancy!"

"Humph!" Petunia shrugged. "If you're going to be such a poor sport, Porky Pig, you can just stop coming to my house on baking day. No more sample cakes for you!"

Petunia flounched off in a huff.

"Now you've done it!" Cicero sighed.

"I-I'll say," Porky moaned. "Petunia is about the best cake baker in town. Well, if I want to get back in her good graces, I'd better practice real hard between now and Saturday and enter one of the events!"

"That's the spirit!" Cicero cheered."Let's head for the rink! I'll help you!"

When Porky's skates were securely on, he teetered to his feet, pushed off cautiously, and coasted across the rink. Just when he felt confident, his feet slipped from under him and down he went! Undaunted, he got up and tried again. But again he fell. And he fell again and again.

In the days that followed, Porky kept practicing with Cicero each afternoon after school ...but without noticeable progress.

"It's no use!" Porky lamented. "Tomorrow is the big day, and the way I keep falling all the time, it'd be just plain silly for me to enter a contest!"

"You sure bounce up and down like a jack-in-the-box," Cicero snickered.

"Jack-in-the-box?" Porky mused thoughtfully. "Golly! You've just given me an idea! I can enter the novelty skating event! Come on, Cicero, help me make my costume!"

On Saturday afternoon the rink teemed with excited contestants and spectators.

"Oh, Porky, I wish you'd tell me about the novelty skating you're going to do," Petunia pleaded.

"You'll see when the time comes," Porky smiled mysteriously.

When the novelty skating event was finally announced, all the contestants went to the dressing rooms to put on their special costumes. Porky waited for his name to be called, and then he coasted proudly out on the ice floor of the rink.

The crowd laughed and applauded their approval as Porky flopped to the floor and bounced immediately upright again.

"Oh, look! He's a jack-in-the-box!" Petunia tittered to Cicero. "How clever! He must have spring sofa cushions tied to him front and back, and every time he falls he just springs right back up again."

After the event was finished, the judges cast their votes and declared Porky to be the winner of the first prize.

"He'll also get first chance at eating all the cake he wants at my house from now on," Petunia said to Cicero.

"Golly!" Cicero grinned, "I guess it pays to keep trying. A fellow never knows what kind of an idea he might pop-up with!"
